

The Egyptian Society of Tropical Medicine, Infectious and Parasitic Diseases (ESTIP)

Founded since 1990 , as a branch of The Egyptian Medical Association

The board of the society represents major medical centers in Egypt.

The society held 15 International Annual Congresses and more than 30 regional medical activity within major governorates in Egypt along the past 20 years.

Many National, Arab and International Societies collaborated in our last medical activities.

Each annual congress was attended by more than 1000 delegates from Egypt, Arab World and International Countries.

Most of the attendants are Hepatologists and gastroenterologists representing most of the major medical centers within Egypt and Arab World.

The society has special interest in fevers, endemic diseases, viral hepatitis, acid peptic disorders, inflammatory diseases, digestive oncology and liver transplantation.

Many International figures are usually invited every year to deliver their recent updates within these fields.

More than 40 pharmaceutical and medical equipment companies usually sponsor our medical activities and our delegates from outside Egypt.
